

AVIATOR GILL SOARS 3,000 FEET HIGH

Perfect and Spectacular Flight of Wright Bros. Biplane Pleases Beyond Expectation the Large Crowd at Home. Coming on Saturday.

Aviator Howard Gill made two of the most perfect and spectacular flights ever witnessed in this state on Saturday afternoon at the Homecoming, in the presence of fully ten thousand people.

On his second flight he soared to a height of fully 3,000 feet. At the time he was above the southern limits of the city, and was plainly seen by all the people down town. He turned and soared on a downward flight to the fair grounds.

Both flights were as perfect as any ever seen, and far surpassed those at the State fair this year. Everyone was greatly pleased with them and more than satisfied. Mr. F. B. Little, who showed the talking pictures at the Crystal, said he had seen many flights in many states, but never had seen anything that equalled those of Mr. Gill on Saturday. They were perfect in every respect.

The paid admissions on Saturday were only a little more than those on Friday. On the former day the receipts were $582.50 and on the latter day $584. Some money was collected by passing the hat to those on the outside.

Mr. Gill was found to be a gentleman in every respect, aside from being a good aviator. He was much pleased with Plymouth and her people, and wants to thank the people for their uniform courtesy to him while he was here. He declared that he had never been in a place where the citizens were so unanimously in accord in boosting their town. Mr. Gill left Saturday for Kempton, N. D., where he will make his next flight.

About three thousand people on the fair grounds Friday saw Wright Bros. aviator, Mr. Howard Gill, make a splendid flight in his biplane. About three thousand more people saw the flight in a way from outside the grounds, but they did not know what they missed by not being inside and seeing the most interesting part of the performance.

Mr. Gill was in the air fully ten minutes. He circled many times around above the grounds, sailed away to the south, returned, made a number of dips toward the ground and ascended again, finally coming gracefully and easily to the ground, along which his biplane ran on its bicycle-like wheels.

Mr. Gill estimated that he was about 500 or 600 feet in the air. His machine is a new one, it having made not more than four or five flights. Mr. Gill himself has been flying only about six months. His home is in Baltimore, but he and his mechanic, Mr. Edwin Knoesel, came to Plymouth from Dayton, O. They go from here to North Dakota. A machine like the one here costs about $5,000. It is smaller and lighter than those for the carrying of passengers. The planes measure thirty feet from tip to tip, and the tail plane measures ten feet.

All Like To See It.

The advantages of being inside the ground is not realized by those who were not there. The people were permitted to gather around the biplane and inspect its make-up. They could see the strong, yet light wooden and metal braces, the wires, the powerful and compact engine, the gasoline tank, the wheels on which the biplane runs as it starts on its flight, and on which it strikes when it comes to earth again. This starting up from the ground and alighting again is the most interesting feature of the flights, and of course, can only be seen by getting into the grounds.

One old farmer who was greatly pleased by the flight said, when asked if he got his money's worth: "Well, I should say I did. I wouldn't have missed it for a dollar."

TREE SURGERY IS BEING DONE IN PLYMOUTH

PURDUE UNIVERSITY MAN AT WORK TRIMMING THE FINE MAPLES OF THE CITY.

WOUNDS ARE HEALED

Many Holes and Bad Spots in Trees of the City Are Being Cared For By Mr. Nisley and Helpers.

"I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes. When they are in danger I recover them," says the Cobbler in Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

Just so today we have surgeons to old trees. When trees are in danger they are recovered by these surgeons, Mr. Geo. E. Nisley of Lafayette, a graduate in forestry of Purdue University, has been here for several days and is caring for many trees of the city.

His work is in trimming the limbs as they should be and filling up any holes and wounds which are found in the trees. Mr. Nisley has already cared for the trees at Dr. Hiteck's residence, Frank Brooke's residence, Nicholas Haas's property occupied by S. E. Boys, J. E. Bergman, Harry Humrichous and Jas. W. Thayer. There is no doubt that most of those owning trees in the city will have their trees attended to while Mr. Nisley is here.

It is interesting to note the processes used by the tree trimmers. All the unnecessary limbs are removed from the entire tree. Then, as a dentist would dig out cavities in your teeth, so these tree surgeons dig out all the decayed portions of every hole in the tree, using sharp chisels and mallets. After this is done, the holes are filled with a cement. Over the cement is put a covering of zinc, which is nailed to the tree and then covered with a black pitch to keep out all insect life. This covering of the holes and wounds on the tree allows it to heal up and continue with a good healthy growth. There are many trees in the city which are gradually decaying and break down, being lost to the owner and the city.

Mr. Nisley is doing a good work for the city in general by his work here and all should be grateful that he has come to Plymouth at this time. He also sprays the trees according to their needs. Many trees are now being decaying by the cottony maple scale. Some on Lafayette street are noticed on which the limbs are already beginning to die, and soon the whole tree will be gone unless protected in a short time. This scale can be killed by the proper spray and Mr. Nisley is prepared to do the work.

Courthouse Trees Butchered.

Mr. Nisley could not express his disgust for the barbarous manner in which the trees in the courthouse yard had been butchered and all but ruined. He did not say whether they could be saved and put into any kind of condition for beauty or service, but if anything of the kind can be done the Commissioners should certainly do it.

As usually treated, a sprained ankle will disable a man for three or four weeks, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment freely as soon as the injury is received, and observing the directions with each bottle, a cure can be effected in from two to four days. For sale by all dealers.

A Wise Old Owl

Said Shiftless Sam: "It is easy enough to make money if you have money to make it with. I see chances every day to make money if I only had a little stake to start with, but a fellow that has no capital doesn't have a fair shake in this world."

Said the Wise Old Owl: "You never will have a stake until you start. Stop your spending and try saving. Pinch out a little of your earning and start a bank account no matter how small. Add to it. The longer you put it off the longer opportunity will give you the cold shoulder." Which one was right, Sam or the Owl?
